Though the workers in the shops of this road struck yesterday, the trains continued to run until 5 o'clock this afternoon, when the engineers and firemen drew the fires and deserted the engines. Communication with points abroad however is still open by way of St. Petersburg and Pskoff.

During the morning a crowd of strikers proceeded to the freight station of the Kursk road and set off the steam of eight engines, drove away the guards and forced the employes to cease work. Traffic over the road thereupon stopped. Later the strikers were attacked by a crowd composed of the rougher elements of the population, but order was finally restored by Cossacks. Otherwise no special disorders have been reported.

Suffering Probable.

The strike coming at this time, is apt to seriously cripple the work of relief in the famine-stricken provinces and also to hamper the movement of this year's grain crop, as the railroads under normal conditions are not able to keep the grain crop moving promptly. Official reports show that 139,829 loaded cars were awaiting removal on October 20 in various sections and that the grain and coal handling districts are daily increasing their accumulations at the railroad stations.

Great suffering is certain if the requisite supplies of grain and other provisions cannot be forwarded into the famine-stricken districts, where, up to the present the work of relief had not been carried out successfully.

IDENTIFICATION IS ABSOLUTE

BERKELEY CRIMINAL IS MILTON FRANKLIN ANDREWS. ACCOMPLICE IS NULDA PETTEE OLIVA.

BERKELEY, Cal., Oct. 22.—Absolute identification of the man who lured William Ellis, the Australian horseman, to a house in Berkeley and then murderously assaulted and robbed him, as Milton Andrews, who is wanted in Colorado Springs for the murder of Bessie Bouton, is contained in a letter from Chief of Police Adams of Colorado Springs received today by Marshal Vollmer of Berkeley. The woman who accompanied Andrews and aided him in the attempt to kill Ellis is declared with certainty to be Nulda Petrolia, a French Canadian, formerly living at Buffalo, N. Y., Montreal or Toronto, Canada. The description of the couple sent out by Vollmer tallies exactly, according to Chief Adams, with the records of the Colorado Springs police headquarters.

GOLD STANDARD NOW OPERATIVE

MEXICO CITY, Oct. 22.—The currency and exchange commission, which has been in charge of matters connected with the putting into operation of the money reform, met yesterday under the chairmanship of Finance Minister Limantour. It was announced that the joint had begun coining new five-dollar gold pieces. The monetary change to a gold basis has been operative now for nearly six months and has brought about stability in rates of exchange on foreign markets, regardless of the variation in the price of silver. Imports have risen, owing to the greater purchasing power of the people. There has been an increase of activity in manufacturing, mining and transactions, etc., and Mexico's change to a gold basis has been effected without perturbation of any kind and resulting in increase of general prosperity.

O'Brien was found to have received a bullet in the neck. His assailants gave the names of Henry Prang and Thomas Sullivan. The former had been shot in the neck and the latter in the leg and arm. The three were taken to a hospital.

O'Brien refused to explain why the other two attacked him. The police think that the affray was the outcome of a feud in a notorious west side ...

M'ADOO FIGHTS

Is Determined to Clean Up New York's Tenderloin District.

A STRONG ADDRESS

TELLS POLICEMEN OF THEIR DUTY—BITTERLY ASSAILS MEN WHO THRIVE ON VICE.

NEW YORK, Oct. 22.—In order to correct an impression that the police of the Tenderloin section had been instructed to arrest all unescorted women found in the streets at night, Police Commissioner McAdoo visited the station house tonight and made a long address to the force. He read the sections of the law on the subject and told the men that he expected them to arrest all improper characters but that the mere fact of a woman being alone did not justify her arrest and that he would deal severely with any policeman found interfering with a reputible woman. The commissioner said in the course of his address:

A Strong Address.

"No one's rights will be illegally interfered with, but this precinct can and will be made clean. There are no difficulties in the way which can not be overcome with legal methods. This precinct is in the very heart of the commercial and social capital of the western hemisphere. It is a disgrace to the city, its morals and civilization that such an ulcer spot as this should exist in the very center of its greatest activities.

"We are bound not only to protect our own citizens, but the vast army of visitors, from those corrupting influences and unsavory sights.

Evil Is Seen.

"You are combating great influences in enforcing these laws; the owners of the property who reap huge profits from the base and criminal uses to which it is put; the vast business interests which thrive on profligacy and prodigality of vice and who are complaining that with them trade is dull and laxity and more potent than all, those men who have grown rich on crime and vice, to whom it is a legitimate industry, whose millions are stained with the blood and tears of wretched women and outcast men, who own the large Raines law hotels where the Asiatic is first robbed of the price of her infamy and when she is arrested compelled to pay them for the bond that releases her. Rich and influential, swaggering and blustering, these captains of the industry of vice and crime reach out their influences into the most unexpected quarters. They do not want a police captain here whom they can not own, and even now they and their hirelings are threatening political disaster to the honest head of the city government for maintaining in office a police commissioner who is not afraid of them."

The commissioner exhorted the men to be loyal to their commander, Captain Hooley, in whom he said he had

ers, the reigning chiefs of the principalities of the Balkans and high-goshed military officers, as well as many Spanish residents of Paris. The presidential train left amid cheering and a salute by a guard of honor.

At all the stations on the way to the frontier there were crowds and provincial authorities, who greeted the president with interminded cheers for France and for Spain. There was an official reception at the frontier town of Irun, where a special mission in behalf of King Alfonso met and welcomed the president.

The president will continue his journey through the night and will arrive at the Escurial at noon tomorrow where he will place a wreath on the grave of King Alfonso XII. He will then proceed to the capital where he will be received in state at the railroad station by King Alfonso.

OFF FOR ALABAMA

President Roosevelt Left St. Augustine, Florida, at 9 O'clock Last Night.

AT MOBILE TODAY

WENT TO CHURCH YESTERDAY MORNING AND TOOK PLUNGE IN THE SALT WATER IN AFTERNOON.

ST. AUGUSTINE, Fla., Oct. 22.—President Roosevelt started tonight for his tour of Alabama. He left St. Augustine at 9 o'clock and is not scheduled to make a stop of any length until he reaches Mobile tomorrow afternoon at 4:30 o'clock.

His day in St. Augustine was a quiet one. He attended services in the Presbyterian Memorial church at 11 o'clock. The pastor, Rev. James Coffin, preached from the text, "Worthy the lamb that was slain." He made no reference to the president in his sermon. The church was crowded.

Went Bathing.

At the conclusion of the services the president was taken for a short drive about the city. After luncheon the president, accompanied by Secretary Loeb, Surgeon General Rixey, John McIlhenny and John Greenway, the last two of whom have been his guests on the trip south, drove to Fort Meyton, where they boarded a launch and went to Anastasia island. Here the party donned bathing suits and had a bath in the salt water. The president greatly enjoyed the bath and seemed in excellent condition to tackle the hard work which lies before him this week.

Accompanied by Police.

When the party left the hotel for the fort the mounted policemen of St. Augustine, who had been waiting in front of the hotel, started ahead as an escort. The secret service man who was on the box with the driver of the president's carriage said to one of them: "We do not need you now."

"That's all right," responded the officer, "we will go along."

They galloped to the fort where they stood at attention while the president rowed the launch and steamed away.

Got Headed West.

Dinner was served at the hotel tonight, after which the president drove to his train. St. Augustine was full of strangers today, attracted by the president. A large crowd lingered around his hotel all day, anxious to catch a glimpse of him. He received but few visitors, however, and got the rest of which he stood in need.

This week will see the end of his trip. After visiting Mobile tomorrow he will spend Tuesday at Tuskegee, Montgomery and Birmingham. Wednesday he will devote to Little Rock, Ark., and Thursday he will visit New Orleans, leaving that evening on a government ves[illegible] for Washington.

REAL ESTATE EXCHANGE COMMITTEE CONTRADICTS TELEGRAPH'S STATEMENTS

The following letter was received last night by The Gazette:

To the Editor of The Gazette:

Will you kindly make room for the following statement in the columns of your paper, for the information of the taxpayers of Colorado Springs? The statement of the committee appointed by the Real Estate Exchange [illegible] December, Mr. A. J. Bendle, would not be found to be as represented, or it would probably would have signed it.

Some time after the [illegible] to Special Agent Lloyd Lehre explained, by invitation, [illegible] of the Real Estate Exchange, F. D. Pastorius, chairman; A. J. Bendle, E. W. Kent and Charles P. Bennett were instructed to represent the Exchange at the conference to be held for the purpose of making the levy for the current year.

At the conference, which followed, Lloyd Lehre explained, from the Real Estate exchange's point of view, the [illegible] the joint committee quite as fully as [illegible]

The committee then met Mr. E. S. Worley, chairman of the finance committee of the council, and [illegible] probable amount of the city levy, and the [illegible] of.

At the [illegible] City Clerk MacMillan for more specific information [illegible] which showed the auditor's report, which [illegible] the condition of the [illegible] to the end of the present fiscal year had expired, [illegible] of the appropriation for the year and expenditures and balances to that date, as follows:

Department.	Appropriations.	Expenditures.	Balance.
[illegible] salaries	$[illegible]	$[illegible]	$4,166.70
[illegible] expenses	[illegible]	11,542.28	5,927.72
Legal department	[illegible]	1,902.95	2,997.05
Fire department	[illegible]	16,041.98	13,032.02
S. A. & B. department	[illegible]	51,594.28	27,405.72
Public buildings and [illegible]	[illegible]	14,585.23	7,414.77
Police department	[illegible]	29,932.04	9,727.96
Health department	[illegible]	6,761.81	6,238.19
Water department	[illegible]	22,528.88	5,791.12
Sewer department	[illegible]	6,872.56	4,858.44
Engineering department	[illegible]	5,167.87	4,832.13
Printing	[illegible]	934.70	4,065.30
Contingent	[illegible]	2,244.14	2,755.86
Totals	$276,345	$178,811.72	$98,134.28

The condition of the Cemetery fund was not learned.

The other appropriations were for the Redemption fund.

An examination of the foregoing tabulation shows that, while by some departments more than the pro rata share for the portion of the year elapsed has been spent, by others much less than the pro rata share has been used, and that of the aggregate appropriations for the general fund less than the average allowance per month has been spent, while manifestly the months requiring much the greater expenditure in some departments have passed. It is safe to say that the expenditures from the general fund for the year ending Feb. 28, 1906, will be well within the total appropriations for that fund for that period. If some departments fall short, both law and custom sanction the transfer of excess from departments having surplusage to those for which the appropriation has been inadequate.

An examination of the auditor's reports for earlier fiscal years will show these transfers to have been of frequent occurrence. It never has been possible at the time of making appropriations to foresee the exact amount of demands to be made on many of the departments.

The department as to whose funds there has been the most professed solicitude is the police department. It has a balance of $9,727.96 to its credit, nearly 4-12 of the original appropriation, for the four and one-half months of the appropriation year yet remaining. It has spent about $2,000 more than the same department had used at this time last year, but it has done some work of which all true friends of Colorado Springs are profoundly appreciative, and the value of which no taxpayer of the typical Colorado Springs sort will limit by its cost in dollars and cents. But if any are disposed to disparage the enforcement of law because directly it is not as cheap as winking at law-breaking and a persistent effort has been made in certain quarters to foster such sordidness of motive—it may be said that the receipts from the police court, which have been paid into the general fund, are about $2,000 in excess of what they were at this time last year, and so do much to offset the added cost of a better execution of the law.

Three of the committee were also present at the meeting, with the mayor and finance committee of the council, of certain citizens to consider the advisability of changing the city's fiscal year so as to make it coterminal with the calendar year. This was not a hasty move, nor was there anything mysterious about the conference, as the evening paper of the 21st inst. asserts. The change has been considered from time to time by various administrations. The time in the present administration for making it, if at all, was manifestly when the levy was to be made. Mr. Tucker, the chairman of the finance committee, had discussed it privately and called an advisory conference in regard to it. To this conference were invited the leading officials of the banks, two ex-aldermen of preeminent service and general business ability, several members of the Real Estate exchange, and others. The unanimous opinion of the participants in the conference was favorable to the change.

In view of the statement of Alderman Tucker, as reported in Saturday's Gazette, that the levy of 15 mills would be "sufficient to carry the city through to January, 1907," it is an unexplainable misrepresentation to say that, because of extraordinary expenditures, making the appropriations inadequate for twelve months, the council proposes to shorten the current fiscal year to ten months, thus making the levy finally determined upon, 15 mills, virtually 17½ mills for two years.

The council does not propose to shorten the fiscal year now current, but to lengthen it to twenty-two months, and confidently expects, on the basis of previous experience, that the levy of 15 mills will be an adequate supplement to the city's receipts to meet all demands arising throughout the entire period of twenty-two months.

The Gazette's report of the statement of the finance committee plainly showed that about $20,000 is all that the city now needs, in addition to estimated receipts, to carry it to the end of the present calendar year. Twenty thousand dollars is not represented by a levy of 15 mills, but of 1½ mills.

The committee, though at the time equally divided for and against the movement, which resulted in the election of the present controlling factor in the city government, is convinced that the affairs of the city were never administered more faithfully, honestly, economically, and with better judgment than at present.

F. D. PASTORIUS, chairman.
E. W. KENT,
CHARLES P. BENNETT.

EL-HAGG-ABDULLAH-ALI-SADIK IS VISITING IN THIS COUNTRY

NEW YORK, Oct. 22.—El-Hagg-Abdullah-Ali-Sadik, Pasha, prince of the Mohammedan church, general of the Abyssinian army, minister of commerce and envoy of Menelik to President Roosevelt, arrived here today on the steamer Cedric. He comes ostensibly in regard to the new treaty of commerce between this country and Abyssinia, but actually his mission is to study the possibilities of closer relations with Europe and America. He has come to America after a stay in Berlin, Paris and London.

Menelik is especially interested in the United States and has already given a home for a legation at Addis Abbeba, the capital in case this [illegible] table one.

The prince speaks no English language and trav[illegible] with an interpreter. On the steamer he wore [illegible] save for a red fez, but when he reached his hotel he donned an oriental costume of [illegible] and wore a turban.

THE HUB CLOTHING COMPANY

One Price Clothiers & Outfitters. 123 N. TEJON ST.

E. G. CUNLIFFE IS INTERVIEWED

HE DENIES TAKING MORE THAN $100,000 FROM EXPRESS COMPANY.

SHIPPED $80,000 IN A SUIT CASE, IS NOT ALLOWED TO SMOKE CIGARETTES IN JAIL.

PITTSBURG, Oct. 22.—Edward G. Cunliffe, the express robber, in a long interview in a local paper denies that he took the odd $1,000 with which he is charged in addition to the $100,000 package, and states that his object in going to Bridgeport, Conn. was to obtain employment on one of the oyster boats of the Bridgeport fleet, a plan that was frustrated by the fact that the boats were not working on account of some labor trouble. He indignantly denied that he furnished a Bridgeport woman money to rent a flat, saying he spent his time in reading about and listening to comments on the robbery instead of loitering around the tenderloin district.

Used a Suit Case.

He shipped the $80,000 in a suit case to Bristol, he said, in care of the express company, figuring on that as the most unlikely place the detectives would search, and when questioned as to the $11,000 still missing evaded reply by railing against the fates which led to the discovery of the $80,000. Cunliffe denounces James Missett of Bridgeport, who informed the Pinkertons of his whereabouts as a "knock," and said he made preparations to skip immediately after meeting Missett but was detained by an attack of cramps. He vigorously denied offering Detective Arnold $40,000, "or even 40 cents," as he put it.

No Cigarettes.

Eisenman, to whom he intrusted the bundle containing $8,500, also came in for a scoring from Cunliffe who concluded by remarking:

"Well, they can't hang me."

For the first day in 20 years Cunliffe has not smoked a cigarette today and he is in a very nervous condition tonight. The rules of the Allegheny county jail permit the use of pipes and chewing tobacco by the prisoners at certain hours, but absolutely prohibit cigarettes.

SAVAGE SCORES FEDERATION OF CHURCHES AND Y. M. C. A.

NEW YORK, Oct. 22.—Rev. Minot J. Savage preached today in the church of his denomination on "The Federation of Churches and the Unitarians." Dr. Savage prefaced his sermon as follows:

"It seems to me fitting that we should know and help others to know whom the federation of churches is not willing to associate with," and after enumerating the names of many famous men and women who have been adherents of the Unitarian doctrine, concluded:

"And these men who have been famous in every department of human service and human life are not to be allowed to be represented in the national conference of the federation of the churches. This is not a new movement. For four or five years there has existed here in New York a city, and I think also a state federation of churches, and the Unitarian churches have been cordially welcomed and fully recognized in all these movements and gatherings. I have been asked to contribute money and I have done it every year. A gentleman in Boston, a Unitarian, contributed $5,000 which was used here in New York to build an Episcopal church. I have no fault to find with that, provided there is enough cordial fellowship and cooperation to go 'round. It does not seem to me that it is quite fair to have it all one-sided. If the federation to take the position hereafter that has been adopted by the Young Men's Christian association? What is that? They are persistent workers, they are ready to take our money of every denomination, get it all if they can, but they never permit us to hold office or have anything whatever to do with their movements. If we are to stand alone, and fight our battles we had better keep our own ammunition in our own hands."

SIX OCCUPANTS OF LAUNCH DROWNED IN DELAWARE RIVER

BEVERLY, N. J., Oct. 22.—A launch containing nine men, all of Philadelphia, collided with a barge in the Delaware river off this place late this afternoon, resulting in the drowning of six of the occupants of the little boat. The other three were rescued by the crew of the tugboat Bristol, which was towing the barge when the accident happened. Those rescued are Captain John Winch, the owner of the launch, W. F. Russell and J. Rutherford.

The dead are:

WILLIAM WINCH.
JOHN ELLIS.
JOHN STEVENSON.
SAMUEL HERON.
NORMAN DELANY.
JAMES YONKERS.

The launch was hired by eight of the men, most of whom lived in the northeastern part of Philadelphia. The older Winch took his son along to assist him in running the boat. The day was spent near Croyden, on the Pennsylvania side of the river. The start home was made late in the afternoon. Opposite this place the launch met the tug Bristol in command of Captain Mott, which was towing a barge to Bordentown. Whether Captain Winch saw the barge is not known, nevertheless he attempted to cross the tug's stern. Captain Mott hailed him and tried to prevent him from doing so. Captain Winch was standing at the wheel of the launch as he went around the stern of the tug. The hawser of the tug struck him and knocked him overboard. Before any one could take the wheel to steer the launch clear of the barge the latter struck the frail boat amidships, capsizing it.

The launch rolled under the barge and its occupants went with it. Captain Mott put the tug about and went to the rescue. He and his crew threw ropes and life preservers to the struggling men in the water, but they were able to save only three of them. The rescued men were landed here by the tug and cared for at a hotel. They left for Philadelphia late tonight.

Captain Mott, assisted by several residents of Beverly, went in search of the bodies and was rewarded by finding three, but darkness put an end to his work. The local authorities sought to have the Philadelphia police to send a tug to Beverly to drag for the other bodies and a police boat was sent to the scene. She arrived here late tonight. The launch was washed ashore. It is badly wrecked.

TROOPS BEING DEMOBILIZED

RUSSIAN SOLDIERS RETURNING HOME—LINEVITCH CONTEMPLATES VISIT TO VLADIVOSTOK.

HARBIN, Manchuria, Oct. 18.—(Delayed in transmission)—Now that the ratification of the peace treaty has been announced to the assembly, permission has been given by headquarters to telegraph the fact that the troops are being rapidly demobilized. All northbound trains from the positions are loaded with troops and their equipment. Half of all the native buildings in the northern part of Kuancheugtsu and vicinity have been requisitioned for use preparatory to this movement homeward, and many of the huts and buildings there will be used by troops which will be unable to move before winter. Lieut. General Linevitch, who has been here since October 12, contemplates a visit to Vladivostok.

A prominent general has been appointed to conduct the movement of Russian prisoners from Nagasaki.

The Russo-Chinese bank is preparing to reopen its former branches along the line of the south Manchuria railroad and is arranging to establish agencies at Dalny, Port Arthur, Yinkow, Mukden and Tie Pass.

The Amur railroad will be immediately extended to Blagovestchensk and Kabarovsk.

Local industries are being re-established.

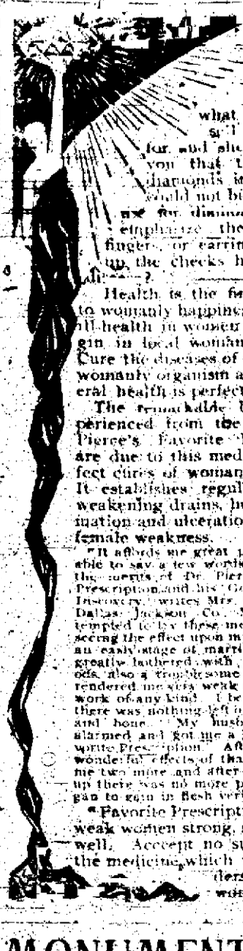
Spokane county Japanese who contributed $3,000 to the mikado's war fund, are expecting daily to receive the wooden cups sent to this country by the emperor as souvenirs for those who contributed to the campaign account.

A. K. Maeda, agent for the Oriental Trading company, announced today that total subscriptions by Japanese in America reached $241,374. Of that amount 70 in Spokane gave $1,000; 25 in the beet sugar fields near Waverly in the southern part of the county gave $1,125 the first time, and 65 gave $1,080 on a second subscription. The 748 Japanese in Portland gave $29,000; those at Seattle gave $42,000, and the 500 residents of Vancouver and Victoria, B. C., subscribed $18,000. Then the Japanese women formed the Ladies' Royal association and in Spokane 16 gave $172; in Waverly seven gave $75; in Portland the contributions from 60 reached $1,020, and 40 in Victoria and Vancouver subscribed $692. According to Mr. Maeda the souvenirs are expected to take the form of little wooden cups, much like a very shallow teacup, about three inches across. They should be lacquered in red with the golden chrysanthemum—the flower of the mikado's family.

VICTOR RESIDENCE BURNS.

Special to The Gazette.

VICTOR, Oct. 22. The residence of Mrs. Laura McAdams, at 503 South Sixth street, was destroyed by fire at an early hour this morning. Mrs. McAdams, who owns and occupied the house, was in Cripple Creek at the time. It is believed that the origin of the fire is traceable to an overheated stove. The structure was of five rooms, was valued at $1,000 and was insured for $600.



Ask a healthy woman what she would sell her health for, and she would tell you that the choicest diamonds in the world could not buy it. What use for diamond ... to emphasize the shrunken finger, or earrings to light up the cheeks hollowed by disease?

Health is the first requisite to womanly happiness. General ill-health in women has its origin in local womanly diseases. Cure the diseases of the delicate womanly organism and the general health is perfectly restored.

The remarkable benefits experienced from the use of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription are due to this medicine's perfect cures of womanly diseases. It establishes regularity, dries weakening drains, heals inflammation and ulceration and cures female weakness.

"It affords me great pleasure to be able to say a few words in regard to the merits of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription and his Golden Medical Discovery," writes Mrs. Flora Arn, of Dallas, Jackson Co., Mo. "I was tempted to try these medicines after seeing the effect upon my mother. At an early stage of married life I was greatly bothered with painful periods, also a troublesome drain which rendered me very weak and unfit for work of any kind. I became so thin there was nothing left of me but skin and bone. My husband became alarmed and got me a bottle of 'Favorite Prescription.' After he saw the wonderful effects of that one he got me two more and after I used those up there was no more pain, and I began to gain in flesh very rapidly."

"Favorite Prescription" makes weak women strong, sick women well. Accept no substitute for the medicine which works wonders for weak women.

MONUMENT IS UNVEILED

POPE PIUS X. HONORED—MANY TELEGRAMS WERE SENT TO HIS HOLINESS.

ROME, Oct. 22.—A monument to Pope Pius X., subscribed for by Catholics all over the world, was unveiled this morning at Riese, the little village in the Venetian province where the pope was born. His holiness is represented in the act of administering a benediction.

The entire village was decorated and national flags were conspicuous everywhere, while the walls were covered with inscriptions, one of which read:

"Long live Pope Pius X., the first citizen of the world."

The authorities formed a procession headed by the patriarch of Venice and six bishops of the neighboring diocese to the house where the pope was born. The eldest sister of the pope and other relatives, who own an organ, called "The Two Swords," where they themselves serve the customers, were the recipients of much attention. Many telegrams were sent to his holiness.

JERRY SIMPSON HAS HEMORRHAGE

WICHITA, Kas., Oct. 22.—Ex-Congressman Jerry Simpson suffered a severe hemorrhage this morning and a light one later in the day. While he has rested from the effects to some extent, the attending physicians fear he can not live through the night. This is the third time within a week that death has been near but after each revival he has shown less vitality; therefore little hope is now held out. The patient was able to take nourishment today, having swallowed nearly a quart of milk. He is still conscious.

Doctors state that a cerebral hemorrhage was the cause of his death.

MARIETTA, OHIO, MAN DROWNED

OFFER IS REJECTED

Cotton Mill Operatives Decline to Accept Proposed Raise in Wages.

WANT BIG INCREASE

DEMAND FOR 14 PER CENT MORE THAN THEY ARE GETTING—TROUBLE LOOKED FOR.

FALL RIVER, Mass., Oct. 22.—The Fall River Textile council representing the organized cotton mill operatives of the city today decided to reject the offer made by the Manufacturers association last week to advance wages five per cent and in a profit-sharing plan. The council had requested the restoration of the reduction of 12½ per cent which went into effect July 25, 1904. No immediate trouble in the mills is anticipated as the result of the disagreement and it is probable that further negotiations will be conducted during the coming week.

Want 14 Per Cent.

The textile council held a special session of two hours and a half duration and, according to Secretary Thomas Taylor, the sentiment was unanimous that the council should insist upon a straight advance of slightly over 14 per cent. The secretary was instructed to notify the association to that effect.

The members of the executive committee of the Manufacturers association when informed of the action of the textile council said that the new scale would go into effect tomorrow in all the print textile mills in the city.

Manufacturers Firm.

The committee has heard of no intention to change the policy adopted and as far as members of the committee are aware there has been no break and will be none in the ranks of the manufacturers.

The great majority of cotton mills in northern New England will not be directly affected by the movement here. Tomorrow's advance in this city and elsewhere will affect about 30,000 operatives.

Work will be resumed by all the Fall River mills in the morning and if any trouble comes out of the present hitch it is not looked for until after next Wednesday.

FIVE BELIEVED TO BE DROWNED

CATBOAT RUN DOWN BY TUG OFF SOUTH YONKERS. CRIES FOR HELP HEARD.

YONKERS, N. Y., Oct. 22.—Five persons, the body of one having been recovered, are believed to have been drowned today by the running down of a catboat by a tug off South Yonkers. Members of the South Hudson Boat club heard cries for help out on the river and in the heavy mist that prevailed were able to make out the outlines of a capsized sailboat and of a tug that was running rapidly down the river. The cries ceased before the yachtsmen, who had put out to the rescue in a rowboat, reached the catboat, which they found deserted and with her side stove in.

In a coat aboard the boat they found a list of names which proved to be those of a party who had gone sailing in the boat. They were Edward Nelson, the owner of the boat, his son Edward, Benjamin Benson, P. Simpson and Carl Thompson, all of South Yonkers. This evening the body of Benson was found not far from the scene of the collision. Nothing had been heard of the missing men up to a late hour tonight.

PROFESSOR JUDD COMMITS SUICIDE

BALTIMORE, Oct. 22.—Prof. Sylvester Dwight Judd, aged 35 years, formerly an assistant professor of biology at Georgetown university, was found early this morning hanging by a rope from a rafter in the garret of his home on the old Frederick road, he having committed suicide.

About a year ago Prof. Judd, owing to mental trouble, lost his government position. He was sent to an asylum, where after having been treated for melancholia and homicidal mania for about ten months, he appeared to be much improved and was discharged about two weeks ago. That he had contemplated suicide was known.

STATEMENT COMPARING GERMAN CUSTOMS TARIFF

Expressing Difference Between Old and New Rates Ad Valorem Terms Based on Estimates of Import Value of Articles in 1903 Given Out.

HINGTON, Oct. 22.—A statement
German customs tariff, comparrates of import duty levied in y upon the old and the new tariffs respectively, was given ay by the department of comd labor. A table has been compressing the difference between
and new rates in ad valorem ased on the German estimates import value of the articles in latest year for which figures ilable.
stimates as to what percentage
rem the new general and cond rates will constitute can only oximately correct at best. If commodities shall not change
as compared with those prein 1903, the estimates of what ad valorem rates will amount be fairly accurate, otherwise ll not. On bacon the rate at charges is 20 marks per 100
id that to be charged under the eral tariff 36 marks, an increase cent.
e products constituting the important items in the export
the United States with Ger-
he highest ad valorem rate of ferns mineral oils, being 71 per valorem on illuminating and 72 on lubricating oils. The specific illuminating oil has been in-66 per cent in the new general
d left unchanged in the con-tariff.
uty on tobacco is 37 per cent ad
and has not been changed in the new tariffs. A series of increases affects agricultural
s. Thus the duty that now coi-
the highest ad valorem rate, per cent, is advanced to about ent ad valorem under the new tariff and 43 per cent under the ional.
pecific duty on wheat is ad-144 per cent, on wheat flour 147
corn, 212 per cent; dried fruit, 150 per cent, and fresh oranges, 200 per cent. The conventional tariffs are somewhat lower. Thus, while oranges coming from favored nations will be subject to duty of 24 per cent ad valorem,
those imported from other countries
will have to pay about 88 per cent ad valorem.
The rates on provisions also have been advanced greatly. The specific rate on bacon is advanced 80 per cent, pork 156
per cent, beef, 200 per cent, the conventional tariffs being somewhat lower.
As to textile manufactures, the old
rates are for the most part moderate.
The duty on sewing machines, representing the highest ad valorem rate
under the existing tariffs among important articles of export from this country, viz., 22 per cent, is raised 46 per cent (i. e. to about 32 per cent ad valorem) under the new general tariff, no provision having been made under the conventional agricultural imports, which pays on the average about 48 per cent ad valorem, will be subject to rates from 20 per cent to 88 per cent higher. The rates of duty on steam engines and motors of all kinds, which were hitherto the same as that on agricultural machinery and averaged four per cent ad valorem, are advanced all the way from 40 per cent to 115 per cent. Motive machinery coming from countries not enjoying the conventional rates will be subject to duties
as high as 50 per cent ad valorem,
while that coming from favored nations will pay duties ranging from 5½ per cent to 35 per cent ad valorem.
Duties on boots and shoes are increased from 20 to 177 per cent, the ad valorem from 8 to 15 per cent. On cottonseed oil the advance is about 25 per cent.
These new tariffs will be the subject of serious negotiation between this country and Germany and the matter probably will be taken up soon after the return to America of Baron Speck Von Sternburg, the German ambassador.

OFFAT ROAD PUMPMAN INVENTS INGENIOUS DEVICE

Patent on Simple Gravity Bar Which Saves Labor nd Insures Safety to Pumps---Expects to Make a Fortune Out of Invention.

to The Gazette.
ER, Colo., Oct. 22.—Jeremiah employed on the "Moffat road"
pman, thought to good purpose
decided that there was a way pump without watching it so as he was employed to. He that there were only a few min-ash day when a pump needed a n, but at those times he was badly. If the smooth-running hould burst a water column
valve, get air in the water or fail heir to any of the e other misfortunes that affect achinery the pumpman must be to stop the wheels or the whole pumping plant would go to Murphy had seen pumps go
many times and he had noticed accidents were accompanied k or jar to the machinery. Ac-y Murphy fixed up a poised bar and adjusted it so when p jerked in working the bar fell
it off the force, saving all damn further breaks. He did it hundred times and then decided d take his ease. So his cut-off nce watched the pump and it when there was a breaks-ille. Murphy sat and gossiped fellow employes who wondered could be so careless as to leave uable machinery to the dangers sible accident.
y Murphy was detected in his us plans. He was called into e of C. T. Carnahan, the Denver man, who said he was willing to interest in Murphy's device if he would have it patented. David H.
Moffat, president of the road, had heard of the pumpman who was so ingenious and said he was willing to back the scheme of financing Murphy's device with Mr. Carnahan. So Murphy drew his time and went about patenting his device and is now in a fair way to make a small fortune.
"It's a simple enough thing," said
Murphy. "If Mr. Carnahan and Mr.
Moffat hadn't decided that they would take an interest in me and make it pay me I would never have supposed it was worth anything. They are good enough to think I ought to get something out of it and, as they are willing to do the financing because they are pleased with what they call my ingenuity, I guess
it is all right.
The thing worked all right for me and I guess it ought to for anyone else who tries it. There was one pump at the Resurrection mine in Leadville which was pumping 225 gallons of water
a minute, lifting it more than 700 feet.
I fixed up one of these gravity contrivances on it and all the attention it needed was oiling every day. One day the pump lost a valve and the machinery was stopped when I got back. Another time the cast iron "Y" in the water column burst and the pump stopped again, the jar swinging the bar into place. It stopped lots quicker than I could have stopped it, for when a pipe bursts its all you can do to reach the cut-off through the flying water.
Murphy takes his good luck with rare complacency and says he is greatly obliged to Mr. Moffat and Mr. Carnahan for putting him on his feet and paving the way for his invention to succeed. He is going to try to invent some more devices for use around mines while he is waiting for his latest effort at inventing to make him rich.

MEXICO'S GRAIN CROP IS SHORT

DUTY ON WHEAT MAY BE REMOVED—BAKERS REDUCE THE SIZE OF THEIR LOAVES.

MEXICO CITY, Oct. 22.—The shortness of the wheat crop is greater than was estimated a few weeks ago and millers are looking for the entire removal of the duty on American and Canadian wheat by the first of next year. The city bakers have reduced the size of their loaves, asserting that it is impossible to give the same weight as formerly. There are some stocks of wheat in the hands of large farmers
here, but not sufficient to bring down
the price, which is steadily rising.
The price of corn is also rising, the advance being over 50 per cent, as compared with the prices of August. This causes hardship among the poor. There is a possibility of the duty on corn being abated.

LOAN NEGOTIATIONS ABOUT COMPLETED

ST. PETERSBURG, Oct. 22.—Negotiations for the floating of a new Russian loan are not expected to be completed before the end of the week.
The representatives of the French,
American, English and German groups of bankers have not yet arranged the basis of participation and some delay is being caused by the illness of one of the French representatives. Nevertheless, the negotiations are reported to be proceeding harmoniously and the flotation of a large international loan approximating $300,000,000 seems to be assured.

TIME FOR BUILDING ROAD IS EXTENDED

MEXICO CITY, Oct. 22.—The government has extended the time for the construction of the Mexican Central's branch from Colima to Manzanillo, on the Pacific coast, to October, 1909. There is already a narrow gauge railroad between Colima and Manzanillo, which belonged formerly to the Mexican National Construction company, but which was recently acquired by the Mexican Central. This road will be made standard gauge. The Central has 3,000 men at work on the extension of its line to Colima from Tuxpan in the state of Jalisco.

FATAL AUTO MISHAP AT SAN FRANCISCO

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 22.—Mrs.
Theodore Plant, wife of a merchant tailor, while driving in an automobile today, was killed. Mrs. Plant was guiding the machine and while speeding along Van Ness avenue made a quick turn to avoid running down a pedestrian. The automobile was capsized and the party was thrown out. Mrs.
Plant met death almost instantly and her mother-in-law, Mrs. Henry Plant, was badly hurt. Theodore Plant, the husband of the woman who was killed,
and his two nieces escaped injury.

MADISON, N. J., Oct. 22.—A big touring car containing three women and four men was upset while crossing a trolley track in Hilton, near here today, and all the occupants were thrown out. James Wilson, the chauffeur, was caught beneath the car and mortally injured, and Morris Cook,
of this place, was seriously injured.
The others escaped unhurt. Immediately after the accident the machine
exploded and was completely wrecked.

JUDICIAL PROCEEDINGS WILL BE SUSPENDED

CONSTANTINOPLE, Oct. 22.—Mr.
Leishman, the American minister, has addressed a note to the porte, a communication against the violation involved in the retrial of Ghirkis Vartinian of the porte's assurances that judicial proceedings would be suspended pending the settlement of the question of principle arising from Vartinian's claim to American protection.

ONLY A SUGGESTION.

But It Has Proven of Interest and Value to Thousands.

Common sense would suggest that if one wishes to become fleshy and plump
it can only result from the food we eat and digest and that food should be al-buminous or flesh-forming food, like eggs, beefsteak, and cereals, in other words the kinds of food that make flesh are the foods which form the greater part of our daily bills of fare.
But the trouble is that while we eat enough and generally too much, the stomach, from abuse and overwork,
does not properly digest and assimilate
it, which is the reason so many people remain thin and under weight, the digestive organs do not completely digest
the flesh-forming beefsteak, eggs and similar wholesome food.
There are thousands of such who are really confirmed dyspeptics, although they may have no particular pain or inconvenience from their stomachs.
If such persons would lay their prejudices aside and make a regular practice of taking, after each meal one or two of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets the food would be quickly and thoroughly digested, because these tablets contain the natural peptones and diastase which every weak stomach lacks, and by supplying this want the stomach is soon enabled to reach its natural tone and vigor.
Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets digest every kind of flesh-forming food, meat, eggs, bread and potatoes, and this is the reason they so quickly build up, strengthen and invigorate thin, dys-
peptic men, women and children.
Invalids and children, even the most delicate use them with marked benefit as they contain no strong, irritating drugs, no cathartic nor any harmful ingredients.
Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets are the most successful and most widely known of any remedy for stomach troubles because they are the most reasonable and scientific of modern medicines.
Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets are sold by every druggist in the United States and Canada as well as Great Britain, at 50 cents for complete treatment.
Nothing further is required to cure
any stomach trouble or to make thin, nervous, dyspeptic people strong, plump
and well.

LAUNCH EXPLODES, DROWNING TWO

CAUSED BY LEAKING GASOLINE PIPE—ACCIDENT OCCURS ON THE MISSISSIPPI RIVER.

ST. LOUIS, Oct. 22.—A gasoline launch containing four passengers, making its first trip on the Mississippi river, exploded this afternoon near Ivory station, 14 miles below the city, and two of the passengers are believed to have been drowned, the other two being probably fatally burned. Fred Phee and an unknown man are missing. Edward Duffy, Sr., and Edward Duffy, Jr., are injured.
Edward Duffy, Sr., and Fred Phee had constructed the launch and were making a trial trip with the new craft.
Duffy's son and a friend of Phee's went along. After plying through the water for three hours the launch suddenly exploded and sank. Another launch in the vicinity succeeded in rescuing Duffy and his son, but Phee and his friend disappeared and are believed to have been drowned. Duffy and his son were taken to the hospital at Jefferson barracks, both being badly burned. Duffy said the explosion was caused by a leaking gasoline pipe.

POPE IS ENJOYING PERFECT HEALTH

ROME, Oct. 22.—A rumor spread through the city this morning that the pope was ill. Dr. Lapponi, his physician, authorizes the Associated Press to announce that "the statement is inexact," the pope merely having a cold,
so slight that it could scarcely be called an indisposition. Since his last attack of gout in January his holiness, the doctor said, has enjoyed perfect health.
Today the pope received over 200 persons. The fact that these audiences have not been suspended is the best evidence of the pope's good health.

QUARANTINES TO BE RAISED

FREER RELATIONS BETWEEN STATES IN FEVER DISTRICT TO BE PERMITTED.

ONLY TWO NEW CASES AND NO DEATHS AT NEW ORLEANS PENSACOLA REPORT UNFAVORABLE.

NEW ORLEANS, Oct. 22.—Report to 6 p. m. New cases 23, total, 3,261. Deaths, none, total, 4[illegible]. New foci, 1. Under treatment, 77[illegible]. Discharged, 2,853.
While this was the fifth consecutive day on which no deaths of yellow fever
victims were reported, which in itself is a cause for much general satisfaction, the most gratifying information came in the shape of a telegram from the state health office of Mississippi that on Monday evening all of Mississippi quarantine would be raised.
Another source of congratulation was a telegram from Dr. Tabor of Texas to the effect that Texas would admit people from Louisiana who would make an affidavit that they had not been near an infected point for six days previously. It is believed that the Texas restrictions will be entirely removed in a short time and that Alabama will also remove all restrictions in a short time. The removal of the Mississippi quarantine is the cause of the satisfaction because of the closer relations between this city and the gulf coast, which is regarded as practically a suburb of New Orleans.
There were no reports of new cases
or deaths from the country parishes today. Those places which did report had no new cases.

VICKSBURG, Miss., Oct. 22.—Three new cases and one death was the yellow fever record for the past 24 hours ending at 6 p. m. today.

PENSACOLA, Fla., Oct. 22.—Yellow fever took an upward jump today and tonight there were reported 12 cases and one death.

AUTUMN SESSION AN EVENTFUL ONE

PLAN TO FORTIFY ANTWERP CONSIDERED—BELGIUM MAY ANNEX CONGO INDEPENDENT STATE.

BRUSSELS, Oct. 22.—The autumn
session of parliament, which opened Wednesday, last promises to be an eventful one. The question of fortifying Antwerp and making that city practically impregnable against a naval attack is the first important matter to be considered. The plan of the government for a new advanced line of fortifications will entail an expenditure of $21,600,000 and in conjunction with the building of these fortifications it is proposed to enlarge the Antwerp docks to about twice their present size. The government bill probably will pass notwithstanding the opposition to the heavy expense involved.
The question of the definite status of the Congo Independent state will also be considered. The impression prevails in diplomatic circles that the governments of Great Britain and Germany
wish to terminate the reign of King Leopold as absolute sovereign of the Congo Independent state and to oblige
Belgium to definitely annex the state.
It is probable that if asked to take final action both houses of parliament will give substantial majorities to the annexation of the Congo as an integral part of the kingdom of Belgium.

OKLAHOMA AND "SEQUOYAH."

IN ONE respect Oklahoma, the most populous, most prosperous, and in almost every other way the most fortunate of the territories, is decidedly unlucky. For several years, she has undeniably possessed qualifications entitling her to statehood, yet two sessions of Congress have denied her admission partly because of their inability to agree whether she should come in as a state or part of a state, and partly because of uncertainty as to the claims of two other territories in no way related to her. Now the situation is further complicated by an effort in the Indian Territory to secure the admission of that territory as the state of "Sequoyah." The five civilized tribes of Indians are interesting themselves in the project in the hope of obtaining a state made up of people of aboriginal descent, but as the Indians in the territory constitute only about one-eighth of the total population, their dream could hardly come true, even if the state of Sequoyah were created.

The federal census of 1900 gave the Indian Territory a population of 392,060, while the count for Oklahoma was 398,391, making a combined population of 790,451. It is now claimed that the two territories have 1,200,000 people, of whom 750,000 are credited to Oklahoma. Both have enjoyed a remarkable growth, due to the fertility of the land, and the opportunities for money-making always to be found in a new and rich country. But it is probable that the enthusiasts have estimated the population too high. One million is probably a safe estimate of the combined population, and even this large figure conveys only a faint idea of the advancement made within a few short years. The Oklahoma strip, as it was then called, was opened in 1889. Now the assessed valuation of its property is $90,000,000. There are nearly 3,000 school houses with more than 200,000 pupils and there is also a university for higher education. Only 5 per cent of the entire population are illiterate. The territory has no funded debt, and there are ninety-two national banks and 254 private banks. Agriculture is, of course, the principal industry, and nearly all of the land is immensely fertile, a fact to which is attributed the bumper crops of recent years which have made both territories so prosperous.

The claims of Oklahoma and the Indian Territory to statehood have nothing to do with Arizona and New Mexico, and it is obviously unfair for Congress to continue to deny those territories admission. Either of them is more justly entitled to be a member of the sisterhood of states, so far as number and character of population, wealth and resources are concerned, than almost any of the other states were at the time of their admission. The Sequoyah plan is not likely to gain in popular favor or to receive the approval of the Senate, but there is no reason why the two territories should not be admitted as one state at the coming session of Congress.

PATENTS AND INVENTIONS.

A FEW years ago a special commissioner, appointed by the Japanese government to investigate the American patent system, declared that patents had made the United States a great nation, and that Japan purposed to establish a similar system. Inasmuch as most of the patents issued relate to some branch of manufacturing industry, which has contributed largely to the greatness of the nation, this statement is in a sense true. The Americans have for more than a century been the most inventive people in the world, and the records of the Patent Office show that they are not losing the quality. On the contrary, if the number of patents issued is a criterion, inventiveness is increasing. During the fiscal year ended June 30, last, 52,323 applications for mechanical patents were placed on file, and 30,236 patents were granted. This was the largest business ever done by the office in a single year.

The industrial advancement of the country is interestingly shown in the records of the Patent Office. The first patent issued in the Colonies was granted in 1641 by the Massachusetts General Court to Samuel Winslow for a new method of making salt, and the first one issued under the act of 1790, establishing the Federal patent system, covered a method of making potash. From that time to January 1, 1904, a total of 758,523 patents were issued. This is nearly one-half as many as were issued by all other countries combined, and about 100,000 more than were issued by Great Britain, France and Germany.

It is recorded that the first patent ever granted was obtained in England during the reign of Edward III, by "two friars and two aldermen for an alleged discovery of the philosopher's stone." It used to be urged in England that patents should not be issued, because the privileges granted the patentee were essentially monopolistic, and thus contrary to the common law. But the opinion finally prevailed that patents should be regarded as rewards to those who by their inventive faculty contributed to the welfare of the whole people. It is fortunate that the framers of the American Government viewed the subject in the same light, for the patent system has unquestionably greatly stimulated invention in this country, and thus contributed largely to industrial progress.

THE PAY OF DIPLOMATS.

WASHINGTON dispatches announce that during the next session of Congress the Administration will make a campaign to secure larger appropriations for the diplomatic and consular services. President Roosevelt is anxious to raise the standard of both so that they will be equal to any in the world, and this cannot be done unless money is provided to make liberal advances in salaries and acquire property for legations and consulates.

Our ambassadors and ministers abroad are notoriously underpaid. The ambassadors to Great Britain, France, Germany, Russia and Mexico each receive $17,500 a year, which in the cases of the first three at least is scarcely enough to pay house rent. During his term at the Court of St. James Mr. Choate paid more for rental than his entire salary amounted to, and his experience is now being repeated by Ambassador Reid. The salaries of the ambassadors to Italy and Austria-Hungary are $12,000 each. The ministers to Japan, China, Spain, Brazil and Cuba receive the same amount, while those to Belgium, The Netherlands, Turkey, Argentina, Chili, Colombia, Guatemala, Nicaragua, Peru and Venezuela get $10,000 each. The other diplomatic representatives receive smaller salaries, some of them being as low as $5,000. As a rule only rich men can afford to accept these positions for in no case is the compensation sufficient to more than cover the expenses of maintaining an establishment in a style befitting the station.

The only foreign legation owned by the United States is the one in Peking, where it was necessary for the Government to buy land and erect buildings at a cost of $100,000. In all other capitals the diplomatic representatives are compelled to rent suitable property and to pay the rent out of their own pockets. This is in marked contrast with the rule followed by other governments, nearly all of which own their legations abroad and furnish them to the representatives rent free. The British government owns its legation in Washington, and it is one of the most magnificent establishments in the city. Germany has recently acquired a site upon which a splendid legation will be built to replace one scarcely less pretentious, and France is soon to build a new embassy. The salaries paid by those governments to their diplomats are also much higher than those received by American envoys. The British ambassador to France gets $50,000 a year, just the sum paid by our generous government to the President.

It is rather humiliating to a first-class power like the United States to know that its ambassador to Germany, for example, has to put in the first two months of his term house hunting, that he has to pay his entire salary or even more for rent, and that even then he is likely to be turned out, as Ambassador White once was, because somebody who is willing to pay more money for the property takes it from him. Congress ought to be mindful enough of the dignity of the nation to make more generous provision.

Professor Percival Lowell says he has discovered that the canals on Mars are for irrigating purposes. If the Martians will turn their telescopes on Colorado ten years hence, they will see some irrigating ditches which will make theirs look tame in comparison.

Of course Mr. McCurdy will not resign. Did anybody ever hear of a man resigning a job worth $150,000 a year in salary and several times as much more in graft? It will take a four-horse team to separate the McCurdy family from its soft snap.

Press Opinions

WHO CAN BE MEANT?

Then there is the newspaper established by the inheritor of vast wealth, who, having exhausted the pleasures nature offers to young men, worn out, cynical, blase, and bored, now seeks notoriety in advertising his peculiarities. He does not care what sort of advertising it is, whether he appears as another "General" Coxey at the head of a ragamuffin brigade of the dregs of society or as the victim of a belief that a great office may be purchased. He is notorious, and that satisfies his depraved appetite for sensation. Like the Malay, maddened with drugs and running amuck, slashing right and left with deadly weapon, he does not care what throat he cuts or whom he disembowels so long as he feels once more he is alive. This newspaper proprietor should be labeled "Handle with care," and placed in a cage by himself marked, "The Gila Monster of Journalism."—Chicago Journal.

WHAT TO DO WITH MR. ROOSEVELT.

Let New York send Mr. Roosevelt to the senate as soon as his term ends. When he steps down out of the presidency on March 4, 1909, Mr. Platt's term in the senate will close, and as he will be 78 years of age at that time he will refuse another election. He already says this is his last term. Let President Roosevelt be chosen to succeed Senator Platt.—Leslie's Weekly.

HOME COMING OF THE REV. DR. BROWN.

No, the disturbance in East End Thursday night was not caused by Dr. Rutledge pulling the devil's wisdom tooth; nor by Captain Ilves chasing off health seekers trying to break into his mineral spring; nor by Mr. L. Cunningham trying to make boisterous Thomas cats swim the Yalu river, but by the Rev. Knighten Brown vigorously applying a board to tender parts of his better half's anatomy. It seems that "My darling Eliza Jane," as the parson calls Mrs. Brown, had failed to put his study in order during his absence from home Thursday, so upon his return that night he proceeded to do the spanking stunt with all its hair-raising trimmings. The result showed that Mrs. Brown's lungs are in perfect condition. The punctilious parson had probably read the recent decision of a Michigan judge to the effect that a husband has the right to spank his wife.—Lancaster (S. C.) Review.

A FIRE IN THE REAR.

The couple was en route to a social gathering when they suddenly discovered they were lost, and as they espied a mail box, the young man struck a match and tried to ascertain the name of its owner, which was on the box. The first match failed, or as he thought, broke and fell to the ground, when, as the old saying, "Try, try again," came to his mind and he proceeded to do so. He soon discovered fire by the smell of smoke and feeling the intensity of flame. They, by investigation, discovered the place on his pants where the match ignited was on fire, and by the supreme efforts of himself and his companion before he was burned to death, [illegible] ones were repulsed.—Leslie (Ohio) Times.

AND she knew it was well with her, whatever the upshot of last night. To be lonely no more; to be no longer the protector always, but the protected; to know the comfort of the strong arm as well as of the following eye, the joy of receiving as well as of giving; to know that, however dark the future might lower, she had no longer to face it alone, no longer to plan and hope and fear and suffer alone, but with him—the sense of these things so mingled with gratitude on her mother's account that the new affection, instead of weakening the old, became as it were part of it; while the old stretched onward its pious hand to bless the new.

If Claude did not read all this in her eyes, and in that one word "Content?" he read so much that never devotee before relic rose more gently or more reverently to his feet. Because all was his he would take nothing. "As I stand by you, may God stand by me," he said holding her hands in his, and with the table between them.

"I have no fear," she replied in a low voice. "Yet—if you fail, may He forgive you as fully as I must forgive you. What shall I say to you—on my part, Messer Claude?"

"That you love me."

"I love you," she murmured with an intonation which ravished the young man's heart and brought the blood to his cheeks. "I love you. What more?"

"There is no more," he cried. "There can be no more. If that be true nothing matters."

"No!" she said beginning to tremble under a weight of emotion too heavy for her, following as it did the excitement of the night. "No!" she continued, raising her eyes which had fallen before the ardour of his gaze. "But there must be something you wish to ask me. You wish to know——"

"I have heard what I wished to know."

"But——"

"Tell me what you please."

She stood in thought an instant: then, with a sigh, "He came to me last evening," she said, "when you were at his house."

"Messer Blondel?"

"Yes. He wished me to procure for him a certain drug that Messer Basterga kept in his room."

Claude stared. "In a steel casket chained to the wall?" he asked.

"Yes," with some surprise. "You knew of it, then?" He had tried to procure it before through Louis, and on the pretence that the box contained papers needed by the state Failing in that he came last evening and told me the truth."

"The truth?" Claude asked, wondering. "But was it the truth?"

"It was." Her eyes, like stars on a rainy night, shone softly. "I have proved it." And, again, with a ring of exultation in her voice, "I have proved it!" she cried.

"How?"

"There was in the box a drug, he told me, possessed of an almost miraculous power over disease of body and mind; so rare and so wonderful that none could buy it, and he knew of but this one dose, of which Messer Basterga had possessed himself. He begged me to take it and to give it to him. He had on him, he said, a fatal illness, and if he did not get this—he must die." Her voice shook. "He must die! Now God help him!"

"You took it?"

"I took it." Her face, as her eyes dropped before his, began to betray trouble and doubt. "I took it," she continued, trembling. "If I have done wrong, God forgive me. For I stole it."

His face betrayed his amazement, but he did not release her hands. "Why?" he said.

"To give to her," she answered. "To my mother. I thought then that it was right—it was a chance. I thought—Now I don't know, I don't know!" she repeated. The shade on her face grew deeper. "I thought I was right then. Now—I am frightened." She looked at him with eyes in which her doubts were mirrored. She shivered, she who had been so joyous a moment before; and her hands, which hitherto had lain passive in his, returned his pressure feverishly. "I fear now!" she exclaimed. "I fear! What is it? What has happened—in the last minute?"

He would have drawn her to him, seeing that her nerves were shaken; but the table was between them, and before he could pass to her, a sound caught his ear, a shadow fell between them, and looking up he discovered Basterga's face peering through the nearer casement. It was pressed against the small leaded pane, and possibly it was this which by flattening the huge features imparted to them a look of malignity. Or the look—which startled Claude, albeit he was no coward, might have been only the natural expression of one who suspected what was afoot between them and came to mar it. Whatever it meant, the girl's cry of dismay found an echo on Claude's lips. Involuntarily he dropped her hands; but—and the action was symbolical of the change in her life he stepped at the same moment between her and the door. Whatever she had done, right or wrong, was his concern now.

CHAPTER XVII.

THE REMEDIUM.

We have seen that for Claude, as he hurried from the bridge, the faces he met in the narrow streets were altered by the medium through which he viewed them, and appeared gloomy, sordid, fanatical. In the eyes of Blondel, who had passed that way before him, the same faces wore a look of selfishness stupendously and heartlessly cruel. And not the faces only; the very houses and ways, the blue sky overhead, and the snow peaks when for an instant he caught sight of them—bore the same aspect. All were their every day sin, and mocked the despair in his heart. All flung in his teeth the fact, the irrefutable fact, that whether he did or lived, stayed or went, the world would go on; that the Abdul hills, ay, and the insensate bricks and mortar would be standing when he was gone into the darkness.

There are few things to the mind of man in his despondent moods are more strange, more shocking, than the permanence of trifles. The small things to which his brain and his hand have given shape, which he can, if he will, crush out of form, and resolve into their primitive atoms, outlive him! They lie on the table when he is gone, are unchanged by his removal, serve another master as they have served him, preach to another generation the same lesson. The face is dust, but the canvas smiles from the wall. The hand is withered, but the pencil is still in the tray and is used by another. There are times when the irony of this thought bites deep into the mind, and goads the mortal to revolt. Had Blondel, as he climbed the hill, possessed the power of Orimanes to blast at will, few of those whom he met, few on whom he turned the gloomy fire of his eyes, would have reached their houses or seen another sun.

He was within a hundred paces of his house, when a big man, passing along the Bourg du Four, but on the other side of the way, saw him, and came across the road to intercept him. It was Baudichon, his double chin more pendulent, his massive face more dully wistful than ordinary; for the times had got upon the councilor's nerves, and day by day he grew more anxious, slept worse of nights, and listened much before he went to bed.

"Messer Blondel," he called out, in a voice more peremptory than was often addressed to the Fourth Syndic's ear, "Messer Syndic! One moment, if you please!"

Blondel stopped and turned to him. Outwardly the Syndic was cool, inwardly he was at a white heat that at any moment might impel him to the wildest action. "Well," he said. "What is it, M. Baudichon?"

"I want to know——"

"Of course!" The sneer was savage and undisguised. "What, this time, if I may be so bold?"

Baudichon breathed quickly, partly with the haste he had made across the road, partly in irritation at the gibe. "This only," he said. "How far you propose to try our patience? A week ago you were for delaying the arrest you know of—for a day. It was a matter of hours then."

"It was."

"But days have passed, and are passing, and we have no explanation; nothing is done. And every night we run a fresh risk, and every morning so far—we thank God that our throats are still whole; and every day we strive to see you, and you are out, or engaged, or about to do it, or awaiting news! But this cannot go on forever! Nor," puffing out his cheeks, "shall we always bear it!"

"Messer Baudichon!" Blondel exclaimed, the passion he had so far restrained gleaming in his eyes, and imparting a tremor to his voice, "are you Fourth Syndic or am I?"

"You! You, certainly. Who denies it?" the stout man said. "But——"

"But what? But what?"

"We would know what you think we are, that we can bear——"

"I will tell you what I think you are!——"

"By your leave?"

"A fat hog!" the Syndic shrieked. "And as brainless as a hog fit for the butcher! That for you! and your like!"

And before the astounded Baudichon, whose brain was slow to take in new facts, had grasped the full enormity of the insult flung at him, the Syndic was a dozen paces distant. He had eased his mind, and that for the moment was much; though he still ground his teeth, and had Baudichon followed him, would have struck the councilor without thought or hesitation. The pigs! The hogs! To press him with their wretched affairs: to press him at this moment when the grave yawned at his feet, and the coffin opened for him!

To be sure he might now do with Basterga as he pleased without thought or drawback; but for their benefit—never! He paused at his door, and cast a haggard glance up and down; at the irregular line of gables he had known from childhood, the steep, red roofs, the cobble pavement, the bakers' sign that hung here and there and with the wide eaves darkened the way, and he cursed all he saw in the frenzy of his rage. Let Basterga, Savoy, d'Albigny do their worst! What was it to him? Why should he move? He went into his house despairing.

Unto this last hour a little hope had shone through the darkness. At times the odds had seemed to be against him, at one time heaven itself had seemed to declare itself his foe. But the remedium had worked, the thing was still possible, the light burned, though distant, feeble, flickering. He had told himself that he despaired; but he had not known what real despair was until this moment, until he sat, as he sat now, among the Dead Sea splendors of his parlors, the fingers of his right hand drumming on the arm of the abbot's chair, his shaggy eyelids drooping over his brooding eyes.

Ah, God! If he had stayed to take the stuff when it lay in his power! If he had refused to open until he held it in his hand! If, even after that act of folly, he had refused to go until she gave it him! How inconceivable his madness seemed now, his fear of scandal, his thought of others! Others? There was one of whom he dared not think, for when he did his head began to tremble on his shoulders, and he had to clutch the arms of the chair to stay the palsy that shook him. If she, the girl who had destroyed him, thought it was all one to him whom the drug accepted, or who lived or who died, he would teach her—before he died! He would teach her! There was no extremity of pain or shame she should not taste, accursed witch, accursed thief, as she was! But he must not think of that, or of her, now; or he would die before his time. He had a little time yet, if he were careful, if he were cool, if he were left a brief space to recover himself. A little, a very little time!

What was that foot and that voice? Basterga's? The Syndic's eyes gleamed, he raised his head. There [illegible] scene he had still to pay! His own score, not Baudichon's. Fool, to have left his treasure unguarded for every thieving wench to take! Fool, thrice and again, for putting his neck back into the lion's mouth. Stealthily Blondel pulled the handbell nearer to him and covered it with his cloak. He would have added a weapon, but there was no arm within reach, and while he hesitated between the chair and the floor of the small inner room the outer door opened, and Basterga appeared and advanced to greet him.

"Your servant, Messer Syndic," he said lightly. "I heard that you had been inquiring for me in my absence, and I am here to place myself at your disposition. You are not looking——" he stopped, short, in well-feigned surprise. "There is nothing wrong, I hope?"

Had the scholar been such a man as Baudichon, Blondel's answer would have been one frenzied shriek of insults and reproaches. But face to face with the massive quietude of this man, with his giant bulk, with that air, at once masterful and cynical, which proclaimed to those with whom he talked that he gave them but half his mind while reading theirs, the wrath of the smaller man cooled. A moment his lips writhed, without sound, then "Wrong!" he cried, his voice harsh and broken. "Wrong? All is wrong!"

"You are not well?" Basterga said, eyeing him with concern.

"Well? I shall never be better! Never!" Blondel shrieked. And after a pause, "Curse you!" he added. "It is your doing!"

Basterga stared. He was in the dark as to what had happened, though the Syndic's manner on leaving the bridge had prepared him for something. "My doing, Messer Blondel?" he said. "Why? What have I done?"

"Done?"

"Ay, done! It was not my fault," the scholar continued, with a touch of sternness, "that I could not offer you the remedium on easy terms. Nor mine, that hard as the terms were, you did not accept them. Besides," he continued, slowly and with meaning,

"Tergue quaterque redit!"

You remember the Sibylline books? How often they were offered, and the terms? It is not too late, Messer Blondel—even now. While there is life there is hope, there is more than hope. There is certainty."

"Is there?" Blondel cried; he extended a clean hand, shaking with vindictive passion. "Is there? Go and look in your casket, fool! Go and look in your steel box!" he hissed. "Go! And see if it be not too late!"

For a moment Basterga peered at him, his brow contracted, his eyes screwed up. The blow was unexpected. Then, "Have you taken the stuff?" he muttered.

"I? No! But she has. And then, seeing the change in the other's face for, for once the scholar's mask slipped and suffered his consternation to appear—he laughed triumphantly! In torture himself, he revelled in a disaster that touched another. "She has! She has!"

"She? Who?"

"The girl of the house! Ay, Anne you call her! Curse her! child of perdition! Anne Royaumie! She? Curse her!" And he clawed the air.

"She has taken it?" Basterga spoke incredulously, but his brow was damp, his cheeks were a shade more sallow than usual; he did not deceive the other's penetration. "Impossible!" he continued, striving to rally his forces. "Why should she take it? She has no illness, no disease. Try—" he swallowed something—"to be clear, man. Try to be clear. Who has told you this cock-and-bull story?"

"It is the truth."

"She has taken it?"

"To give to her mother—yes."

"And she?"

"Has taken it? Yes."

The scholar, ordinarily so cool and self-contained, could not withhold an execration. His small eyes glittered, his face swelled with rage; for a moment he was within a little of a fit. Of what mad, what insensate folly, unworthy of a schoolboy, worthy only of a sot, an imbecile, a Grio, had he been guilty! To leave the potion, that if it had not the virtues which he ascribed to it, had virtue or it had not served his purpose of deceiving the Syndic during some days or hours—to leave the potion unprotected, at the mercy of a chance hand, of a treacherous girl! Safeguarded, in appearance only, and to blind his dupe! It seemed incredible that he could have been so careless!

True, he might replace the stuff at some expense; but not in a day or an hour. And how—with one dose in all the world!—keep up the farce? The dose consumed, the play was at an end. And end—or, no, was he losing his wits, his courage? On the instant, in the twinkling of an eye, he shaped a fresh course.

He cursed the girl anew, and apparently with the same fervor. "A month's work it cost me!" he cried. "A month's work! And ten gold pieces!"

The Syndic, pale, and almost in a state of collapse for the bitter satisfaction of imparting the news no longer supported him, stared. "A month's work?" he muttered. "A month? Years you told me! And a fortune!"

"I told you? Never!" Basterga replied slowly, and opened his eyes in seeming amazement. "Never, good sir, in all my life!" he repeated emphatically. "But—" returning grimly to his former point—"ten gold pieces, or a fortune, no matter which, she shall pay dearly for it, the thieving jade!"

The Syndic sat heavily in his seat, and, with hand on either arm of the Abbot's chair, stared dully at the other. "A fortune, you told me," he said, in a voice little above a whisper. "And years. Was it a fiction, all a fiction? About Ibn Jasher, and the Physician of Aleppo and Monsieur Laurens of Paris, and—and the rest?"

ABDUL, THE BLEST

The Sultan's Luck, or Extraordinary Turns of Fortune for the Ottoman Ruler.

Abdul Hamid has sometimes been described as "the damned." [illegible] subjects, particularly in view of recent events, regard him as blest by Allah and as in a very particular degree under divine protection. This regard is to him not only a source of pride, but likewise of security. In [illegible] oriental countries to [illegible] a finger against those upon whom [illegible] favor has set its mark by some public manifestation of interest and favor. It is for this reason that lunatics and imbeciles are not only allowed [illegible] liberty in Moslem lands, but are moreover treated with the most marked forbearance and kindness. They are believed to be objects of special solicitude to the Almighty. A man proverbially [illegible] is [illegible] lucky, and especially one who has repeatedly escaped, as it were, from the jaws of death, enjoys much the same consideration as the crazy people in that a belief is created that [illegible] ing under the immediate care of Allah and any attack directed against him is calculated to invite dire misfortune and divine wrath upon the assailant.

A few weeks ago the sultan seemed to be in the direst straits. His supremacy as Caliph was being attacked from many directions. The greater part of Arabia was in revolt, and reports of defeats sustained by his troops in the Yemen reached Constantinople almost daily. Both Mecca and Medina seemed to be on the eve of casting off their allegiance to the Sublime Porte, and the grand shereef of Mecca, [illegible] had been susceptible to British influence as owing his power in a large measure to English support and protection.

I do not know for certain whether it was Lord Curzon who inaugurated this campaign. But, at any rate, his name has been identified there and throughout the orient, and it was on him that the various chieftains of Arabia looked for inspiration and assistance. His sensational retirement from [illegible] which in the eyes of Asiatics will be construed in the light of a disgrace [illegible] of his sovereign's disapproval of [illegible] policy, is calculated to arrest, for the time at any rate, the Arab movement against the sultan, and meanwhile the latter will strain every [illegible] to complete the pacification of Yemen, a course of construction from Damascus to Mecca, more than one-third of which has already been laid.

It is estimated that two years are needed for its completion. By that time Abdul Hamid will be able to pour troops into the Holy places and to establish more firmly his hold upon them, realizing that it is upon their possession that rest both the foundation of his throne as temporal ruler of Turkey and his pretensions to the spiritual supremacy over the 300,000,000 human beings who profess the faith of Islam.—Ex-Attache, in Pittsburg Dispatch.

TELLING MI[illegible]

A patrolman brought a prisoner into a Detroit police court charged with vagrancy.

"What's your name?" asked the court.

"Tellus."

"Tell you?"

"No, Tell-us."

"Oh, I see," replied the judge, although he looked very much perturbed, and it was plain to see that he did not see at all. "What's your first name?" he ventured.

"Tellus."

"Oh, I see. What's your name again?"

"Tellus."

The judge pulled his moustache very hard and glared. "Say," he spluttered, "why don't you tell us? What's the answer?"

"Tellus Tellus, that's my full name," repeated the prisoner. Then he wrote it out as follows: Tellus Tellus.

After the guests had waited for half an hour in a Berkshire church for the bride to arrive, messengers were dispatched to the livery stable to try and discover what had happened. The groom, made to understand that he had omitted to send a carriage to the house, acknowledged that all the blame rested on him, and apologized in a manly fashion. But what they asked of him was that he should proceed to remedy the delay he failed to see their point. "What'll be the use o' fetchin' 'er now," he said, "the service'll be 'alf over." This resulted from the germination of the grain of wheat while affixed to the ear drum.

BOY IS ARRESTED FOR BEING DRUNK

SAYS HE GOT LIQUOR IN COLORADO CITY SALOON—CASE WILL BE INVESTIGATED.

Harry Johnson, 17 years old, living at 1012 North Wahsatch avenue, was brought into the police station last evening so intoxicated that he could hardly walk. When questioned by Captain S. S. Stewart as to where he secured the liquor responsible for his condition the boy said that he had purchased and drank it at the Hoffman house saloon in Colorado City. The lad was found in Colorado City by two friends who brought him to this city, but the boy insisted in yelling at the top of his voice and attracted the attention of Officer Harper who made the arrest. Johnson was kept at the police station for several hours and was later turned over to friends who took him home. The case will be called to the attention of the juvenile officer and the district attorney.

GOES ON MISSION OF IMPORTANCE

SECRETARY WRAY WILL SEE THAT COLORADO GETS PLENTY OF RAILROAD ADVERTISING.

Colorado Springs will get its full quota of advertising in the tons and tons of literature issued by railroads next year, if the efforts of the commercial and business interest organizations of the city count for anything.

Henry Russell Wray, secretary of the Colorado Springs Chamber of Commerce, leaves today for Chicago, where, on Wednesday, he will attend a meeting of the advertising agents of the Rock Island, Burlington Santa Fe, Missouri Pacific and other railroads. Mr. Wray will represent the business interests of Colorado Springs at the meeting and endeavor to get this city properly represented in the books, pamphlets and folders issued by the railroads.

The railroads which desire to feature Colorado Springs for the summer tourist business next year will be provided with numerous views of the principal places of scenic interest, and it is probable that these will be a feature of much of the advertising issued by the roads of the middle west. Many illustrations have been prepared for this purpose, and others will be secured in case the railroads desire to use them. Mr. Wray will return from Chicago on Saturday.

DR. ELLIOTT A. BOYL IN LYCEUM COURSE

The first entertainment in the [illegible] Lyceum course was given [illegible] evening in Perkins hall by the Mary [illegible] Entertainers. [illegible] the audience was not large, it was not lacking in enthusiasm nor appreciation of the splendid program rendered. Certainly, the verdict in other cities may be regarded with truth: "The first lady quartet on the road." The [illegible] work was especially fine, for the voices blended beautifully and gave evidence of great talent, as well as careful drilling.

The next attraction in the course will be Rev. Dr. Elliott A. Boyl, the orator, one of the best on the lecture platform. Of him it is said: "For word painting he holds the magic wand."

THROWN FROM BUGGY AND BADLY BRUISED

Thrown from the buggy in which she was riding and escaping without any bones being fractured, was the experience of Mrs. Thos. J. Fair, wife of the foreman of the street department, yesterday afternoon. Mrs. Fair started from her home at 1106 Grant avenue shortly after 3 o'clock with the intention of visiting the soda springs at Manitou. Just beyond Colorado City the horse shied, turning the buggy so that she was thrown to the ground. A severe shock to her nervous system and bad bruises were the sum total of her injuries.

ADVERTISES FOR A WIFE

WANTS A HELPMEET WITH MONEY WHO WISHES TO ADVANCE HERSELF INTELLECTUALLY.

According to an advertisement in a Denver paper, Edward O. Cutts, of Colorado Springs, is tired of single wretchedness and wants a wife. Cutts is a man of peculiar characteristics. In the workaday world he is what is called a "jack-of-all-trades," but he spends much of his time in scientific research. It is not a mere whim which moves Cutts to adopt this somewhat unique method of finding a helpmeet. The successful applicant to share the fortunes of Cutts must conform to certain "specifications." She must be a brunette—a woman of "temperament," for Cutts is a working man, and it is hard for him to get into the society of the kind of woman he wants.

"A school teacher would not do," Cutts is quoted as saying, for she would be a poor occult scientist. A teacher's life is spent in trying to please the public—and a real, good occult scientist should care but little about the opinion of the public. I want a wife who will sympathize with my nature. I belong by temperament to the intellectual class, and for that reason my wife must have money, for then I shall know that she has had an opportunity to advance herself intellectually."

According to Cutts' belief, there is a distinction between his kind of spirituality and the fakir class. Spiritualism appeals to him. He believes in divine healing and thinks his powers in this direction might be cultivated if he had a wife of like temperament.

Cures Winter Cough.

J. E. Glover, 101 N. Main St., Ottawa, Kas., writes: "Every fall it has been my wife's trouble to catch a severe cold, and therefrom to cough all winter long. Last fall I got her a bottle of Horehound Syrup. She used it and has been able to sleep soundly all night long. Whenever the cough troubles her, two or three doses stops the cough, and she is able to be up and well." 25c, 50c and $1.00. Sold by Heiley-Arcularius Drug Co.

FOUR COYOTES MEET DEATH AT SKINNER'S

Four hungry coyotes died yesterday at Skinner's and De Course, seven miles southeast of this city. One of the coyotes had only three legs. Joe Kenyon and five of his hounds, accompanied by eight out-of-town folks, were responsible for the deaths. It was one of the most successful coursing trips and one of the best day's killings made this season. All the deaths occurred within one hour and 40 minutes.

JOINT TICKET AGENCY FIGURES TOURIST RUSH

The following figures, compiled by G. W. Painter, joint agent at Colorado Springs, show the amount of tourist business which has come to the City of Sunshine since June 1:

Regular summer tourists	15,000
Stop-overs	18,000
G. A. R., Epworth leaguers and Eagles	27,000
Short stop-overs not validated here	15,000
Total for season	75,000

These figures approximate and cover only the tickets handled at the local joint agency. Mr. Painter says that officials of the Western Passenger association estimate this summer's business as 61 per cent better than the summer of 1904.

LIGHT WEIGHT BUTTER SOLD

MARKET MASTER GETS WARRANT FOR ONE OFFENDER AND FINDS PARTY TO OBEY LAW.

Under the administration of Alvah I. Mowry, as market master, the dairy output of Colorado Springs has attained an exceptional standard of excellence. This is shown by the chemical analysis of butter, milk and cream included in the report which will be forwarded to the secretary of agriculture by the health department of this city today. It is emphasized by the fact that no case of typhoid fever in Colorado Springs the last summer can be traced to the use of milk.

Mr. Mowry's methods are quick and effectual. When he finds a man who is an offender of the health or market ordinances he swears out a warrant for that person and then holds it over him against a second offense.

Such a warrant was sworn out last Saturday against a man who was caught with light weight butter in his possession. The chances are that it will never be necessary to serve this warrant. Two weeks ago Mr. Mowry says that almost every ranchman was intentionally or unwittingly selling light weight butter. He issued [illegible] against the offense and last Saturday he only found one violator.

When Mr. Mowry became market master the 18 dairies in operation in and about the city, and contributing directly to the city's supply, contained many gross offenders as to cleanliness. Few if any, of them used live steam for sterilizing. Now not one of them could be prevailed on to abolish his boiler. Most of them have built new milk houses. Mr. Mowry visits each of them at milking time for inspection once or twice a month and sometimes oftener. He demands that every dairyman milk with a dry hand.

MR. AND MRS. HAMLIN'S INFANT SON IS DEAD

The death of Clark Gunnell, the little son of Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Clark Hamlin, and grandson of Judge and Mrs. Allen T. Gunnell, occurred most unexpectedly at an early hour yesterday morning at the family residence, 1126 [illegible] street. He had passed his first birthday anniversary on Oct. 6, and was then the picture of health.

The little fellow had been suffering from a slight cold for a few days, but no alarming phase appeared until late Saturday afternoon, when bronchial pneumonia suddenly developed. A council of physicians was called at once, but medical skill could not avail against the insidious disease.

While overwhelmed with her bereavement, Mrs. Hamlin is [illegible] and composed, although the absence of Mr. Hamlin in New York city adds to her grief. As Mr. Hamlin can not arrive home before Wednesday the funeral arrangements must be made later. The services will be conducted by the Rev. E. W. Work and the Rev. C. S. Brooks, and interment will be private.

EVANGELIST SERVICES CONTINUE THIS WEEK

Several people began the Christian life at the services at the First M. E. church yesterday morning and several more at the Sunday school session in the afternoon. The Rev. W. J. Colfee preached in the morning on the text: "For God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten son that whosoever believeth in him should not perish but have everlasting life." Mrs. Colfee sang with good effect "Just a Little Bit of Love."

There were a number of conversions at the evening service. The house was crowded and great interest was manifested. The evening theme was "Conversion or the New Birth." The chorus and the solos added to the interest of the service.

There will be services every evening this week, except Saturday, beginning at 7:30 o'clock. Day services will be held at 3 o'clock on the afternoons of Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday and Friday.

RELIGIOUS SERVICE FOR CITY PRISONERS

Religious services were held at the city jail yesterday morning, conducted by Henry C. Ottinger, assisted by about fifteen members of the Methodist church. The singing was especially impressive and nineteen men who are in the jail for various offenses left their cards, books and papers, to listen to the music. When the visitors left the building they received a cordial invitation from officers and prisoners to come again.

TRAIL OF BLOOD LEADS TO JAIL

RAILROAD MAN STRUCK A COLORADO CITY OFFICER AND WAS CLUBBED INTO SUBMISSION

A trail of blood on the [illegible] sidewalk from the Hoffman [illegible] to the city jail was the result of Timothy Lyons resisting Officer Ike Gilliland, who, in the discharge of his duty, sought to quell a disturbance in Colorado City at noon yesterday.

Lyons is a hostler in the Rock Island roundhouse at Roswell. He was intoxicated, it is alleged, and began a row with Will Reily, whom he chased to meet in front of the Hoffman [illegible] rooms and shaved him against a window, smashing it in. Officer Gilliland interfered, when Lyons struck him a [illegible] blow in the mouth. He was then [illegible] by Justice Dunnington Wednesday afternoon of this week at 2 o'clock. Ballou says there was some threat of a gun play. Neither combatant appears to be seriously battered.

ALLEGED THREAT OF A GUN PLAY

CARL G. LOTAVE ARRESTED ON COMPLAINT OF KINGSLEY BALLOU ON ASSAULT CHARGE.

Carl G. Lotave was arrested by Constable Harvey Dillingham yesterday afternoon at 2 o'clock charged with assaulting Kingsley Ballou. Lotave is an artist with a studio in the Hagerman block, and has a residence on West Kiowa street. His alleged assault upon Ballou is said to have taken place at Ballou's decorating establishment, at 28 East Kiowa street, yesterday at noon. Ballou interrupted Justice O. H. Dunnington's lunch to swear out a warrant for Lotave's arrest, and the paper was immediately served on Lotave at his residence. Lotave gave bond in the sum of $50 for his appearance before Justice Dunnington Wednesday afternoon of this week at 2 o'clock. Ballou says there was some threat of a gun play. Neither combatant appears to be seriously battered.

RICH ORE CUT AT GREAT DEPTH

IDAHO SPRINGS, Colo.—A big body of ore has been opened in the Saratoga heading from the Newhouse tunnel. The streak is now thirty inches wide, heavily mineralized and full of gray copper. It is identically the same ore as the west ore shoot of the old workings from which over $1,000,000 has been taken. The ore is the high grade product that has made the name the richest of the great mineral belt and from the tunnel is accessible to operations as never before.

The discovery of this ore shoot and the beginning of the ore and Moon shoot of smelting ore in the Newhouse lateral finally and fully mark the unqualified success of tunnel mining as inaugurated by the Newhouse tunnel, the pioneer of all tunnel enterprises. They are the consummation of the efforts of years in working out a courageous theory of mining which had an object of millions in fortunes for those who projected and supported it, and a consolidate prosperity of unmeasured extent to this community. That the product two years from now, brought to daylight at the portal of the Newhouse tunnel will be greater than ever came from a single avenue cannot now be doubted, and a dozen other tunnels are advancing day and night toward other equally certain fields of mineral deposits.

The Newhouse is a certain and wonderful success, so also will be the Lucania, McClelland, Central, Rockford, Burns-Magee and Hogsel John.

Manager J. C. Hall is exhibiting a quantity of gold specimens from the Torpedo mines that are extraordinary. They are wonderfully pretty in a frost work of crystallized gold and give to the ore almost incalculable value. While the entire streak is not made of gold specimens it carries very large values and is in a continuous shoot of considerable extent. The shoot has been known for a good while and in driving the tunnel through it several rich settlements of ore were made. The tunnel driving, however, was not interrupted and no stoping has been done until now the ground is being stulled and will be mined out.—Idaho Springs Gazette.

NEWS OF THE WEEK AMONG THE MINES OF GILPIN COUNTY

Development of the Castleton Mine---Good Returns from Bobtail Lease---Sinking in the After Supper Shaft---Other News.

CENTRAL CITY, Colo.—The Castleton mine at the head of Virginia canon, is being operated by Cleveland, O. parties under a lease and bond and is under the local management of William M. Kirk of Russell gulch. Operations have been resumed with full force after an idleness of several decades. Work is now being carried on in the 425-foot level where they are sinking a winze again and the prospects for encountering bodies are reassuring. The output of ore of low grade ores in the upper levels, which will not be taken down for the present as it is the intention of the operators to develop along the main level on the property so that in this manner the production can be extracted and taken out through the Eureka tunnel, workings which would be an economical method of handling a large production. It is the intention to sink the present shaft an additional depth of 200 feet and continue to open up new ground with the aforesaid object in view, so it is more than likely that the Chicago lead lessees will erect their own plant for treating the production in the future to be carried on East river or South Clear creek. In the meantime they will experiment with a view to obtaining the best solution of handling their low grade ores of which they have a large tonnage.

Jenkins & company, who are working in a lease between the twelfth and eleventh levels of the Bobtail property from the Gregory and Bobtail Mining company, have received returns from their first shipment of smelting ores which carried values of 12 ounces gold, 30 ounces silver and copper values, amounting to a net value of $60 per ton. These ores were shipped to the Chamberlain sampling works at Black Hawk and they also have ready to ship over 200 tons of milling ores to the Bobtail mill, from which they are getting average values. These ores were taken out inside of three weeks and the lessees feel that they have a big chance to clean up good money on their lease judging from present prospects.

Jones & Jones, operating the Perrin Consolidated lease, have been sending out several cards of free milling ores to the Black Hawk stamp mills during the past week, from which they are getting returns of two ounces gold and upwards. They are also hoisting some very nice looking smelting ores and the property is reported to be showing up very satisfactorily. A plant of machinery was recently installed and a new shaft-building was erected and the lessees have been acquiring additional depth.

Sinking operations have been suspended at the Chicago-Gilpin property on Bobtail hill at a depth of 500 feet where levels are being extended on both sides of the shaft with prospects of soon getting into some good ores, reports Manager Bruce M. Mayers. The intention is to continue sinking again at an early date so as to have plenty of new ground for opening up ore bodies. About 22 men are at work on company and leasing account and regular shipments of milling and smelting ores are being kept up, the smelting ores giving values of between $30 and $60 per ton while the milling ores return fair values. Chicago parties are interested in the property which is located in Gregory district.

Sinking operations are in force at the After Supper mine near Black Hawk by the Banzai Mining company, and good headway is being made with day and night crews. The shaft is down about 410 feet and it is to be sunk to a depth of 425 feet, where drifts will be driven off allowing a distance for sump purposes. In sinking the shaft they have a small streak of smelting ores which is reported to be carrying increased values with added depth. The drift running into the hill at a depth of 240 feet is showing improvement, there being about 10 inches of smelting ores which carry very fair values. Connections are being made between this and the 140 foot level, which will furnish improved ventilation to the underground workings. The property is not making regular shipments, but under its development is making test lots at intervals. Eastern and Colorado people are interested in the property, with L. R. Tatum of Denver as manager, and A. Watters of Nevadaville in charge of the underground workings. Considering its location the property has a bright future.

J. E. Hopkins of Denver came up on yesterday morning to make arrangements for a resumption of operations on his Steely Hollow property, situated in Gregory district, which has been idle for a number of years. The main shaft is down 800 feet and as soon as it has been attended to in the shape of necessary retimbering, development work in the shape of sinking another lift of 100 feet will be commenced. The starting up of this well known property will furnish employment for an additional force of miners, and is the best news of the week.

The Black Hills And Denver Gold Mining company is driving away on its main or Pack tunnel, which is now in a distance of over 400 feet and good headway is being made with one shift, using electric drills, a night crew being engaged in mucking out the tunnel. The new building for the treatment of ores is completely covered in and the machinery will be installed as rapidly as is possible. Eastern people are largely interested in the property with M. H. French of Denver as manager and J. S. Bush of Tolland as superintendent. The company is also driving the Gulf tunnel in a northwesterly direction into Mineral hill, it being a crosscut tunnel and intended for the opening of the claims on the east end of the property, as well as carrying with it assessment work on some claims. This tunnel is now in a distance of a little over 400 feet.

Kansas parties are interested in the International tunnel on South Boulder canon, which is being driven to cut the Copper King and other valuable veins. It is a crosscut tunnel and is at a distance of over 400 feet, and Contractor Davidson has been doing some outside work for the Kansans, but will keep driving the main tunnel ahead to cut the Copper King vein.

It is reported that some free gold ores have recently been found in the Victoria-Phoenix mine on Buckeye mountain by Denver operators, and that the carload shipment made to the Denver smelters brought returns of over $100 per ton.

Drifts are being extended east and west at the 300-foot point in the Free Gold mine on Perigo hill, reports Superintendent Eva, who is looking after the interests of F. A. Burnell and other Denver associates. A steam plant of machinery was recently installed on the property.—Central City Register-Call.

RED MOUNTAIN DISTRICT MAKING GREAT PROGRESS

Unlimited Capital and Energy Are Rejuvenating Famous Camp---Large Tunnel Contract Let by Frisco Company---Will Build Mill.

SILVERTON, Colo.—No section of the world-famed San Juan country has made greater strides in mining during the present year than has the Red Mountain district, extending from the town of Silverton clear over the line into Ouray county. Years ago the Red Mountain district came to the front as a wonderful producer of the precious metals, and was widely known throughout the mining world. The territory was thoroughly prospected, and many promising locations made which later developed into paying mines. But that was in the days before silver declined, and when the white metal was the chief object of the miner's labor in these parts. For the most part the various properties were owned and operated by individuals or by small companies with limited capital, and when the silver slump came they were forced to suspend operations. After lying semi-dormant for a dozen years or more, however, the present year has witnessed a wonderful rejuvenation in the Red Mountain mines, and today finds them principally in the possession of large corporations and syndicates, with unlimited capital, who, fully realizing that mining these days in the low-grade camps must be carried on extensively to be made a paying proposition, are on the ground for the purpose of operating on a scale fully commensurate with the merits of the territory. Milling plants have been established for the treatment of the immense bodies of low-grade ore that are daily being exposed, and mining is being carried on upon a scale never before dreamed of. The four companies that are now operating in the Red Mountain district, just over the San Juan county line, whose properties are all tributary to Silverton on account of ore having to be brought out this way for shipment to the smelters, are the Barstow Mining company, the Treasure Tunnel and Mining company, the Red Mountain Railroad, Mining and Smelting company and the Imogene Basin Mining company. Many other smaller companies and individuals are actively operating in the territory and are regularly shipping mineral at a handsome profit. Altogether, it is conservatively estimated that upon the properties of the four larger companies mentioned there has been expended up to date no less than $1,000,000 in development work, which is still going on with enlarged scope.

One of the largest tunnel contracts ever let in San Juan county has just been awarded to Richard Whinnerah by the Frisco Mines and Tunnel company, whose property is located on Houghton mountain, near Animas Forks. The contract which is on record in the county clerk's office here calls for 5,000 feet of tunnel 6x7½ feet in the clear, to be completed at the rate of not less than 180 feet per month, the price for the work to be $16.50 per foot. At this rate it will take over two years to complete the work and the cost will be about $82,000. Contractor Whinnerah is now engaged in installing a complete outfit, consisting of engine, boiler, compressor and six Ingersoll-Sargent air drills. Three shifts of men will be employed on the job, and work will begin on the big bore within the next few days. Upon the Frisco company's property there are a number of large veins of splendid milling ore, which will be run clear through the mountain, coming out on the Ouray side. This is done for the reason that on the other side a superior mill site can be obtained, and the natural facilities for milling are superior to what they are on the side of the mountain toward Animas Forks. A milling plant will be established before the completion of the tunnel.

A party of Milwaukee capitalists, through Denver promoters, have just obtained ownership of a valuable group of claims located near the summit of Galena mountain, between the Anti-Periodic and the Ridgeway groups. The ground is now being surveyed and platted, and as soon as this is accomplished the owners will incorporate to develop their group on an extensive scale. Frederick E. Schurman of this city is local manager for the new company.

The Bullion Mountain Mining company, operating in the Needle Mountain district, has closed down operations for the winter, after a fairly successful summer's campaign of development work. The management of the company states that operations will be resumed early in the spring.—Daily Mining Record.

JUST AN EVERYDAY BRIDE

"ISN'T it difficult," said Polly, "to choose between two things when you want them both?"

The jeweler's clerk smiled patiently and I shifted my weight to the other foot. Polly slipped the ring on her finger and hung the jeweled cross about her neck.

"I haven't known that feeling," I whispered in answer to Polly's question, "since I met you. Before that it was chronic."

"Of course," interrupted Polly, "the ring is more valuable, because it is more expensive; but the cross is prettier—"

"Oh, as to the expense," I replied, "there is very little difference in that; it consists merely in the fact that I shall pay outright for the ring, while nobody knows how much I shall finally expend in replacing lost settings and buying chains, and putting new clasps on the cross. It is very much like the difference between purchasing an Oriental and an American wife. The first you pay for in spot cash, and are done with the bargain, while the second is a lifelong investment into which you sink treble the money."

The clerk grinned appreciatively. I decided that he had been married.

"Of course," said Polly with a glitter in her eye that shamed the diamonds, "if you think either gift too expensive for your wife and have changed your mind about—"

"Excuse me," said the clerk, "I have something prettier in the safe," and hastened away as a clerk should always do at such moments.

Polly I said reproachfully, "that was unkind! Nothing is too expensive that is worth the money, not even a wife. You do not give me time to explain that while the American wife costs more in the long run, she is like the cross much prettier, like the ring much more valuable in the Oriental wife."

Polly turned to the mirror and began fastening her cross to make the ring show.

"You put it that way," she replied, smiling at me from beneath the rim of her hat, "it's not really so bad. But it sounded as if you were comparing me with one of those stupid little Japanese girls that are bought and sold outright like a pound of cheese or a spool of silk."

"Impossible!" I cried. "There is nothing stupid about the American girl, and I defy the father who would attempt to sell her outright. She sets her own price, and goes to the highest bidder of her own free will. She knows her exact value, and whether to demand a Newport cottage and an automobile or to accept a diamond ring and a trip to Niagara Falls. She appraises herself with the keenness of a pawnbroker and she doesn't sell out for one penny less than her cash value until she begins to see that she is getting rusty and going out of fashion."

"And then I suppose she puts herself on the bargain counter with the rest of the old maids and widows with encumbrances," rejoined Polly, sarcastically.

"Exactly," I agreed, "and now will you have the cross or the ring?"

"It is perfectly horrid of you," pursued Polly, ignoring my interruption, "to talk of matrimony as though it were an auction sale, and of girls as though they were oysters. It makes love seem just like the shine on the jewels instead of the whole thing."

"Well, isn't the shine on the jewels the whole thing, after all, Polly?" I asked, turning the cross until it glittered in the light. "We don't think of the price, or the weight, or the value of the ring or the wife after the bargain has been closed."

"How much did I cost?" asked Polly, suddenly.

I jumped.

"Now, Polly," I pleaded.

"How much did I cost?" repeated Polly, inexorably.

I took a seat on the stool beside her and began counting on my fingers.

"Well, let me see," I began thoughtfully, "first, one diamond ring, hundreds of boxes of bonbons, enough theater tickets to make a bonfire, suppers and dinners and luncheons that would have fed the Newsboys' home for a year."

"Ugh!" interposed Polly, "and to think you kept count!"

"A lot of wedding souvenirs," I continued, "a house and garden and the price of a cook and a gardener, one club—"

"One what?" cried Polly.

"One club—which I have lost forever," I continued dreamily, "half a dozen flirtations, which were proving very interesting, and all my bachelor friends, to say nothing of shoes and hats and chiffons and jeweled crosses and—and—"

"And you're still paying!" cried Polly, gleefully.

"And I'm still paying," I repeated sadly.

"I'm so glad!" announced Polly.

"Glad?" I inquired in an injured tone of voice.

"That I did cost a lot," replied Polly. "I—I was afraid I had sold out cheap! If a wife is really an investment, like a horse, or a dog, or an automobile, then it must follow that the more a man pays for her, the more he must prize her—whether he pays in money or in self-sacrifices. The wife who demands an unlimited allowance and daily attentions, like the blooded horse, that must be handled with care and have a groom to wait upon him, will be treated with consideration and displayed with pride, while the unassuming little thing who is willing to be happy with what is left from the household expenses, and a kind word now and then, will be respected and regarded like the stray dog that is satisfied with the bones thrown to it after the feast. Indeed," continued Polly, "it isn't the shine on the jewels, but the price he pays for them, that makes a man value them, and the thing he values most in this world is the thing it has been hardest for him to get. It isn't the real value of a girl, but the value at which she holds herself that impresses the masculine mind. The apple at the top of the tree may not be half so sweet as the apple lying on the ground, but nine men will climb after it, to one who will stoop to pick up the poor little thing lying at his feet," and Polly held out her finger and regarded it with a business-like air, while I felt myself shrivel into insignificance.

"How did you decided," I inquired meekly, "which of those jewels—"

"And yet," said Polly, musingly twisting the ring, "lots of girls fancy the marry for love."

"That is the beautiful illusion which the American girl still preserves for herself as well as for her husband," I explained. "Doubtless the girl who will marry Jimmy Paddelford, red nose, retreating forehead, cigarettes and all, will fancy and make him fancy, too, that she is marrying for love."

"Well," said Polly, with what I thought unnecessary resentment, "Jimmy Paddelford is not so bad. He has his good points."

"Which consist," I rejoined, "in his father's pocketbook and his automobile."

"He is awfully sweet natured," argued Polly, "and no matter how much his wife might cost, he never would remind her—"

"I should like to know how you discovered all that."

"I was once engaged to Jimmy Paddelford," exclaimed Polly, looking steadfastly at the ring she was twisting on her finger.

"Doubtless," I suggested, stingingly, "you would have been perfectly happy with him in a sixth-story flat, doing your own work and spending your evenings darning in his pinky eyes—"

"Ugh!" exclaimed Polly, putting both her hands over her face, "I—I—see what you mean, Jack."

"But no girl ever sees it," I sighed, until she has made her bargain and put the seal of matrimony on it; she merely gets the shine of true love all mixed up with the glitter of gold and the man she is going to marry confused with the cut of his clothes and the odor of the violets he sends her and the whirr of his automobile. She is not always intentionally mercenary, but like a cat or a baby, she is attracted by the toy or the bar plum dangled before her eyes and dazzled by anything that glitters, and she sends poor Robin off—"

"To the bargain counter," suggested Polly, "where he usually manages to console himself."

"One sometimes finds actual prizes on a bargain counter," I remarked.

"I suppose," sighed Polly meditatively, "that is why all the attractive girls seem to marry the unattractive men and vice versa."

"It is why," I corrected, "the most attractive girls are always the last to marry, and always marry the worst. They keep up the bidding and hesitate to sell out, thinking that they may yet get a higher price until they become shop-worn and ready for the bargain counter."

Polly gazed at me coldly.

"Am I shop-worn," she asked with distinct emphasis, "or am I unattractive, Mr. Cutting?"

"You're neither," I declared, "you're an exception—in everything, Polly."

"Am I worth the price you are paying—"

"Polly! You're worth—anything!"

"Or—did I have to sell out cheap?"

"If madam will pardon me," said the clerk, appearing suddenly behind the counter, "I could not find the jewel in the safe, but—"

"Never mind," said Polly, sweetly, "I have decided—"

I murmured thanks to Deity.

"To take both the cross and the ring," finished Polly.

"But, my dear—"

"At least," whispered Polly, bending toward me, "if I must go for a price, I shan't be on the bargain counter!"

JUST A COP.

Policeman George Gibbin of the Twenty-second-st police station is a brave man and a good climber. He saved the peace of a neighborhood and the life of one small gray and white kitten at night.

Night before last the Bongiovanni baby missed the kitten. Pussy had gone out on the fire escape and didn't know the way back. Instead it climbed to the roof of the East Eighteenth-st

When it began to rain the kitten climbed down to the roof of the Harding Methodist church, next door, and naturally began to cry. Most any child in her place would have done the same.

But the neighbors threw boots, kettles, clubs and coal at her. And the more they threw the more she cried, till the whole neighborhood was up in arms.

All day yesterday kitty sat on the roof and cried till the people were frantic. Then up the street came Policeman Gibbin, handsome and strong, and admired by the women. "Save us!" cried the housekeepers.

"From what?" said the officer, seizing his stick and glaring like a true guardian of the peace.

They pointed at the cat on the roof. The patrol sized up the electric lamp pole next to the church and took off his helmet and club, while the people gathered.

"I could have done it easier 20 years ago," he muttered, as he loosened his belt and prepared to climb. Then he twisted one strong leg around the pole and went up like a boy of 14 to the top of the pole, where he stepped to the roof of the church.

Kitty was glad enough to come down, and nestled in his vest front while he slipped down the pole again.

Baby Bongiovanni was waiting for her, and the women folk cheered the brave policeman, who blushed becomingly as he put on his coat and helmet and said:

"Sure, that's no trouble; no trouble at all. It's good it will do me, the stretching."

MUSICAL DENTISTRY.

"A piano player as an adjunct to the dentist's set of tools is a novelty to me," said a woman. "I just had to see the dentist the other day and as it happened my regular practitioner was on a vacation, so I went to another man near by.

"He took me in hand in good shape and started the buzzer going. Then before he put it to my tooth he walked over to a piano I had observed in the corner and touched a button. The thing began playing right away, and ran from ragtime to sacred music before it stopped.

"The music seemed to distract attention somehow, and the dentist had finished his job in what was an unusually short time. But I think it was more the novelty than the soothing qualities of the music appealed to me.

"The dentist told me, however, he had found the instrument helpful quieting nervous patients."

SHE WAS KISSED.

Two students went out for a walk and looked around for something in the way of amusement.

"Say, kid," said the teller of the story as an open car stopped in front of them, "you don't dare kiss the girl in the alice-blue hat."

The "kid" sized up the girl at the end of the seat and turned to his friend.

"What do you bet?"

"Bet you two bucks."

The "kid" gave a hurried look about for an insurance agent or minions of the law, sprinted for the car, which meantime had started, and swung on to the step near the girl. A resounding smack rose above the buzz of the car. Before the girl could realize what had happened he had dropped off. Then the girl screamed and the conductor hurried forward to her aid to learn what had happened. She was so excited that the car traveled two blocks before she could explain. The conductor, irritated possibly by her screams, rang the bell and stopped the car.

"I wonder what I had ought to be asked of a stout, dignified man who sat in a rear seat.

"Pull that bell and let us go," said the dignified person.

The girl, who had stopped screaming and taken refuge in tears, replied indignantly:

"O, you heartless man! she cried. "Good Lord, woman, do you want to tie up the whole system because a young rascal kissed you?"

She did not answer and the car moved on.

Saved His Life.

J. W. Davenport, Wingo, Ky., writes, June 14, 1905: "I ought to tell you I believe Ballard's Snow Liniment saved my life. I was under the treatment of two doctors, and they told me one of my lungs was entirely gone, and the other badly affected. I also had a lump on my side. I don't think that I could have lived over two months longer. I was induced by a friend to try Ballard's Snow Liniment. The first application gave me relief; two 50 cent bottles cured me sound and well.

It is a wonderful medicine and I recommend it to suffering humanity. Sold by Hefley-Arcularius Drug Co.
